Preface

Finding the Film

The following information was extracted from Court records filmed in 1950 by the Genealogical Society of Utah and in 1973 by Richmond, Virginia State Library. These public records can be viewed online through FamilySearch.org. The full images of the record with their volumes can be viewed on film number 007646033. Instructions at the end of this book will show you another way to find this film on FamilySearch.org.

How I started this project

I was looking for more information for my Thompson family that lived in Pittsylvania, Virginia in the late 1700s and early 1800s. I decided to read through each page of these court records looking for anyone with the last name of Thompson and other related families. After a few pages of seeing so many names, I decided to record every name I found on a spreadsheet so that I could locate them again if I discovered I was related to some of these other people that were included in the different records.

After recording many of these court records, I began to realize that this information would be very helpful to others researching early families in Pittsylvania, Virginia. I also realized that for many of these people who were slaves at this time period, this might be the only record of their names. It is still difficult to identify them because in most cases they are just listed with their first names, but I feel these court records are very important records to verify that these people existed.

I have struggled to find a way to make this information available for others to quickly find their ancestors. I finally decided that a book might make this information more accessible to others researching the early families of Pittsylvania, Virginia. I added an image of the cursive description of one inventory item found in each person's account along with a written translation of the word or words in the actual record. The drawings in this book are my own drawings and only a representation of my interpretation of the actual inventory item the person owned.

Types of Accounts

Most of the accounts are for a person who is deceased. Deceased person's account are usually accounts current, account sales, division of property, inventories, and occasionally something else. Some of these records provide family relationships such as in the division of property, guardianship accounts, etc. Other records provide information about people with the same name, but the relationship is not given. In these cases, more records need to be found to determine relationships.

Many of the people listed in the accounts are just purchasing items from the estate and have no relationship. I have found that often some of the people purchasing items are related as cousins, uncles, or by marriage, etc. Other buyers are simply neighbors.

Another thing to remember is that people often married people from the same area. At the time of these records, neighbors might not be related, but within a few years they became related by marriage of their children or grandchildren.

The Table of Contents

The Table of Contents lists all the account holders' names. In most cases it is a deceased person for individual account. The account holders are listed in the order they are found in the court record book. (They can be found alphabetically in the Index at the end of this book.) Most records are of an inventory of the deceased person's belongings. Some of the accounts show the sale of the deceased person's property and who purchased the item(s). A few of the accounts are for living persons such as the guardianship records. These usually list the living children and is an accounting of the finances used to support these orphaned children. Occasionally, the widow is listed if she is receiving something from her deceased husband's account from the will or dower if there was no will.

Contents of the Account Holder's Record

The Account Holder's Record contains the following:

1. The account holder's name in bold letters
2. The type of account
3. The year
4. The page numbers
5. The image number on the film (the blue underlined Page number and Image number is a link to the record)
6. The names of other people found listed in the account. The people are listed alphabetically and not in the order found in the account. In some cases, their name appears more than once in the account and duplicate names are only listed once on the primary person's account name even though multiple entries may be found in the record.

Index

The Index at the end of this book lists all people indexed from this Pittsylvania, Virginia record alphabetically with the associated page number where the name is located in this transcription record. The bolded names listed in the Index are the account holder's names listed in the Table of Contents.

Side Notes

I did the best I could at transcribing the names, but in some cases, it was very challenging to read the name. In many cases, the names were spelled with different variations even in the same record. I hope that I deciphered the names well enough that an individual can be located by using the index.

I really enjoyed reading through these records. I found some very interesting things about my relatives and I was able to better verify the time frame that they lived in Pittsylvania. My purpose in publishing this information is to help others find their ancestors in these hard to read records.

Best Wishes

Toni Norman

Finding the record through Family Search

If you would like to find this film on your own, you must first log into FamilySearch. Then click on the Search link in the main menu.

Then click on the Catalog item in the left column menu. On the dialog, click on the "Film/Fiche/Image Group Number (DGS)". In the DGS field, type in the film number and then click the Search button.

After the Search button is selected, the link to the film on the Search results should appear with a link to several Accounts. Click on "Accounts current, inventories, etc..." link for a selection of Image Group Numbers (DGS) where the film number that was entered should be in the listing as shown on the following page. Click on the little camera image and the microfilmed image should be displayed. This book covers the first section of this microfilm.
